Tracking and Animal Behaviour by Lee Gutteridge

PROFILE: Lee Gutteridge has been involved in guiding and related industries for 25 years. He owns Nature Guide Training PTY/ LTD and is a FGASA endorsed training provider. He started his career as an army tracker and has subsequently been an anti-poacher ranger, head ranger, lodge manager, safaris manager and reserve manager during his career.

Lee is one of only a handful of FGASA Scout guides in South Africa, with FGASA Level 3, and SKS qualifications in Dangerous Animals (SKS DA), Dangerous Game (SKS DG) and Wild Flowers (SKS WF) and Birding (SKS B). He is also a paleoanthropological specialist guide and a senior tracker and tracking instructor and assessor. He is a recognised assessor and trainer for FGASA with more than 15 years of assessing and training experience in the field. He also completed a diploma in Game Ranch Management.

TOPIC: Animal tracks are used by hunters in tracking their prey and by naturalists to identify animals living in a given area. The study of Tracking and Animal Behaviour is valuable in research on animal health and welfare. The lecture will look at understanding animal behaviour in different environments and provide insights that can help improve their living conditions.
